Amid Cold War tensions and domestic change, Americans were searching for symbols to unite them. Greenwood, known for his heartfelt storytelling style, responded with lyrics that celebrated freedom, sacrifice, and belonging.

The song debuted in 1982, quickly climbing the charts due largely to its emotional resonance. The mid-1980s in America were marked by a renewed sense of patriotism under President Ronald Reagan, and Greenwood’s anthem perfectly captured the zeitgeist of that era. The song was inspired by Greenwood’s own experiences as a musician and his observations of the pride Americans had in their country. Its release coincided with a period when the United
