Structure of Government Under the Articles

Under the Articles of Confederation, the government consisted of a unicameral legislature called the Congress of the Confederation. There was no executive branch or national judiciary. Each state had one vote regardless of size or population, which sometimes led to disagreements and inefficiencies.

Strengths of the Articles

- Allowed coordination among states during the Revolutionary War. - Provided a mechanism for managing western territories. - Enabled the negotiation of the Treaty of Paris, ending the war. - Created a system for admitting new states.

Weaknesses of the Articles

- Congress lacked the power to tax, relying on voluntary state contributions. - No power to regulate interstate or foreign commerce. - Amendments required unanimous consent from all thirteen states. - Inability to enforce laws or compel states to comply with national decisions. 1. Central Authority: The Articles created a weak central government, whereas the Constitution established a stronger federal government with distinct executive, legislative, and judicial branches.
2. Taxation and Revenue: Under the Articles, Congress lacked the power to tax, relying on voluntary state contributions. The Constitution granted Congress explicit taxation powers.

Understanding this framework requires more than rote memorization; it demands a thorough exploration of its mechanisms, limitations, and enduring influence. This article analyzes how the answer key illuminates key concepts, contextualizes historical failures, and informs modern interpretations of federal and state relations. ###

In general, only free, open-access, or public domain versions of Articles Of Confederation Worksheet Answer Key may be shared freely.
